The first workshop will explore photography as a resource to reconstruct family, identity and community genealogy. We are also going to reflect on Afro-descendants in Mexico and its Afrochicanx diaspora. We invite you to bring your Family Album photos to share, and if you don't have them, we'll share tools on how to digitize them.

The second workshop will focus on Flavors of the African Diaspora, especially the African origins of Mexican foods. This will be an interactive dialogue about the importance of Afromexican foodways as a form of cultural retention with sensorial engagement with food, through touch, taste, and storytelling.
